ENVIRONMENT MATTERS

TV is more than buying audiences. Environment matters. Where the ad lives is just as important as who it reaches, maybe more.

Advertisers who limit themselves just to audience buying run the risk of placing ads in front of people at a time when they aren't engaging or responding.

WHAT THEY WATCH

"Television remains the best channel for conveying emotional brand images and sustaining them over time."* Leading advertisers continue to partner online video with television - combining television's powerful immersive experience and broad reach with online video's ability to target and optimize frequency. Taken together, these two media are increasingly and critically important to advertisers' campaigns.*

ROI TOP PERFORMERS

“By 2021, we expect television and video to have a combined 48.8% share of global ‘display’ advertising – a higher share than television ever achieved on its own.

Television and online video are working harder for advertisers than ever before.”* Maximizing ROI through multi-screen viewership opportunities is the driving principle at Destination Network.

Close to the Point of Purchase

Great marketers shift investments to where conversion performance is highest... closest to the time of purchase by consumers.* In tourism markets, that means targeting visitors in hotels and resorts.

Visitors are excited to be here. They are nearby, they have money, and they are looking for ways to spend it. We are in the room with them... we are as close to the point of purchase as you can get.

“The big screen is making a comeback, bigger and better than before.” TV is the proven brand-building medium: the dominant cultural and advertising channel of choice. Far from killing television, the internet is now part of the TV and video ecosystem. Smart TV penetration has grown from under 10% to nearly 40% in four years.

SIMULTANEOUS USAGE - Nielsen

AUDIENCES HAVE MORE MEDIA AT THEIR DISPOSAL & USE THEM SIMULTANEOUSLY

When it comes to the media universe, the abundance in devices, services and content has never been more prevalent, which in turn is opening up a complex web of consumption behaviors. With all of this technology at consumers' literal fingertips, which of these platforms are they focused on? The answer, in short, is pretty much all of them.

According to the most recent Nielsen Total Audience Report, adults in the U.S. spent almost 10 ½ hours a day with media. With the vast amount of time Americans spend using their devices, it is inevitable that some usage occurs simultaneously. So even though audiences are dedicating hefty amounts of time to different platforms like live/time-shifted TV (nearly five hours per day), radio (nearly two hours per day), and digital devices (over three and a half hours per day), they're combining consumption in a multitude of ways.

According to the Nielsen survey, learning about the content they're consuming is a popular action, with 71% of respondents having looked up information related to the TV content they were viewing and 51% doing the same for audio.

Meanwhile, marketers and advertisers should be glad to know that 35% of TV viewers have shopped for the products and services advertised on the main platform.

This highlights a need for an omnichannel marketing strategy in the digital age, as well as making sure brand messages lean into click-through conversion.
